

This proposal is a bad idea raised to the level of asininity.

The FCC regulates frequencies, emission standards and the like. This proposal has no bearing on a product's required performance. It would place the FCC in a position of telling a manufacturer how to build a product; Why not regulate the color of communications equipment?

This proposal would drive the cost of equipment up and the reliability down. I am very much opposed to it.